Overseas Markets Commentary

Choppy trade featured across major European equities markets overnight, support from some positive oil market trade, reduced September rates expectation from Friday's US jobs report, and indications the Bank of Japan was prepared to initiate further stimulus, unable to produce ultimate gains.

US markets remained closed due to a public holiday.

The UK's the August services PMI provided cheer, reported at 52.9, following 47.4 in July. The British pound consequently traded at seven-week peaks against the $US.

In the euro zone, the composite PMI for August was revised to 52.9, from the initial 53.3 estimate, and against July's 53.2. Germany's services sector PMI appeared to concern, falling from 54.4 to 51.7 for the month.

Tonight in the US, ISM's non-manufacturing activity index is due, together with final services and composite August PMIs from Markit. An economic optimism index is also due, together with a labour

Commodities Commentary

Oil – confirmation Russia and Saudi Arabia had agreed to work towards stable oil markets pushed prices higher yesterday, but questions regarding the chances of tangible outcomes meant prices did not hold.

Saudi Arabia's oil minister denied any need for a near-term production cap, while Russia's said his nation would consider co-operating in any freeze.

Meanwhile, the United Arab Emirates' (UAE) energy minister vowed support for 'any joint efforts which will benefit market stability'.

Brent crude settled at $US47.56/bbl, 1.6% higher for the session after trading at $US49.40/bbl.

In limited electronic Nymex trade, WTI traded as high as $US46.53/bbl. No WTI settlement is recorded for Monday due to the US public holiday.

Gold – no settlement for US futures recorded due to limited electronic trade while the US observed a Monday public holiday weekend. Futures held, however.

In other precious metals news, the chance of industrial action across South Africa's platinum sector appears to have firmed.

Base metals – a weaker $US and yet stronger oil supported some trade, but a G20 vow to monitor China's steel output was viewed as adversely impacting some sentiment.
